U.S. SENATE SEEKS LIGHT ON TREATIES AFFECTING CHINA

Calls For Copies Of All Pacts With Japanese And With Germans

President Is Requested To Supply Data Used At Peace Conference

DISCUSS SHANTUNG

Decision And League Both Are Being Attacked By Republicans

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, July 16.—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has passed a resolution unanimously demanding that the State Department shall furnish copies of any treaties affecting Japanese and German rights in China, particularly the Chino-German Convention of 1898 and the Chino-Japanese treaty of 1915.

President Is Requested To Furnish Documents

Washington, July 15.—The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate has requested President Wilson to submit to the Committee all documents considered by the American peace delegates.

President Wilson is soon proceeding to tour the United States. He will speak in every important town on behalf of the League of Nations.

The Republicans in the Senate are attacking the League and also the Shantung settlement.

Debate On Secret Treatics

There has been a heated debate in the Senate on the resolution of Senator Lodge asking President Wilson to furnish information regarding the alleged secret treaty between Japan and Germany.

Senator Norris, a Republican, raising the question of Shantung, declared that ratification of the League of Nations leaving the Shantung question as it stands at present would be the blackest page on the history of the nation.

Senator Hitchcock, a Democrat, declared that the resolution was based on the most flimsy information and argued that the Treaty of Versailles gave China far more than she lost.

Senator Lodge's resolution was adopted.

President Calls Conference

Washington, July 16.—President Wilson is inviting a party of Republican senators, including Senator Lodge, to a conference to discuss the Treaty and the League of Nations.

Substitute For Home Rule Act Will Be Presented Shortly

Announcement Is Made To Lords That Government Has Come To Decision

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 15.—In the House of Lords today, Lord Birkenhead (F. E. Smith), replying to Lord Macdonnell, stated that the Government had come to the decision in Irish affairs at an early date to devise a substitute for the Home Rule Act.

Referring to Sir Edward Carson's speech on the 13th, Lord Birkenhead said he was surprised at Ulster's apprehensions in view of the Government's assurances that there would be no coercion. He did not believe either Ulster or the Sinn Fein would accept Dominion Home Rule if it was shorn of control of the Army and Navy. He saw no hope of a satisfactory solution until law and order had been vindicated.

Discusses Carson's Speech

London, July 16.—In the House of Commons today, during a debate criticising Sir Edward Carson's speech cabled on the 18th, on Mr. J. R. Clynes' motion for adjournment, the Attorney-General declared that the speech was not an offense against the law. There was nothing in it, however much it was regretted, upon which legal proceedings could be founded.

Mr. Adamson, the Leader of the Labor Party, declared that the Government's attitude was as dangerous as the speech itself and the decision of the Government was irreconcilable with its treatment of certain Laborites who are still in prison.

Mr. Bonar Law asked if a prosecution was desired with a view to influencing public opinion, although the Government knew there was no case.

Has No Remedy

Mr. Adamson said if the Attorney-General was right there were other means of signifying the disapproval of the Government.

Mr. Bonar Law added that it was a very unfortunate incident, but he was satisfied with the Attorney-General's answer. The Government could take no action unless it was advised the speech was illegal.

Mr. Clynes' motion was rejected by 217 votes to 73.

Reports Of Clash Between Japanese And Chinese In Manchuria Sent To Peking

Tokio War Office Statement Blames Chinese And Says Twelve Men And One Officer Were Killed And Others Wounded

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 22.—According to foreign reports, fifteen hundred Chinese soldiers entered Changchun on the evening of the 19th and began commandeering vehicles. The Japanese interfered and the Chinese fired on them. Captains Autien and Yamamoto, seventeen other Japanese and sixteen Chinese were killed and about twenty wounded on each side. Eventually the Chinese and Japanese leaders quelled the fighting.

The Japanese Minister Mr. Obata discussed the affair at the Waichiaopu yesterday, but made no claim in connection with it.

The Japanese Consul-General at Changchun expressed the opinion that the matter will not be made a serious diplomatic affair. General Chang Tso-lin, the Military Governor of the Three Eastern Provinces has asked the government to severely punish Captain Meng, who was in command of the Chinese troops.

Gets Japanese Report

According to Japanese official reports, the conflict at Changchun was the result of an attack on a Japanese railway employee by Chinese soldiers, in view of which four Japanese officers accompanied by a number of soldiers went to the Chinese camp to lodge a protest. These were fired on by the Chinese and retaliated. The fighting lasted an hour and half.

None of the reports bear out that part of the Harbin message stating that the Japanese arrested two Chinese soldiers, one of whom was immediately shot.

The incident of commandeering carts in the Railway Zone by Chinese soldiers occurred some days previously and had no direct connection with the conflict though it may have caused strained relations.

Orders Troops Punished

A mandate has been issued reprimanding the Kirin troops for causing trouble with the Japanese troops as related in reports from General Chang Tso-lin and General Kao Tsung-hsi. The President orders severe punishment to the officers concerned while Kao Shih-pin, the Commander of the First Kirin Division, is dismissed from his post to await investigation and punishment. General Meng En-yuan, the Military Governor of Kirin, is ordered to leave Kirin immediately and Pao Kuei-ching is instructed to proceed to Kirin as soon as possible.

Tokio Issues Statement

Tokio, July 21.—The War Office has issued a full statement concerning the collision between the Chinese and Japanese troops at Changchun the gist of which is as follows:

Since the dangerous situation owing to the friction between the tuchuns of Kirin and Changchun, in Manchuria, the Japanese troops have very strictly been observing neutrality.

On the 19th Totaro Funatsu, an employee of the South Manchurian Railway, was crossing a narrow bridge near Changchun when, observing four Chinese soldiers coming from the other direction, he retraced his steps to let them cross first. After crossing they addressed insulting remarks to Funatsu, who replied in the same manner. The Chinese immediately assaulted and disabled Funatsu, who was unarmed. Two Japanese happening to pass the spot, finding Funatsu seriously wounded, immediately reported the matter to the commander of the Japanese Garrison at Changchun.

Start Of Fighting

Lieutenant Sumita, with ten privates, was despatched to the Chinese commander to demand an explanation. During the interview the Chinese suddenly fired, wounding Lieutenant Sumita in the head. They afterwards bayoneted him in the head and neck and killed him.

Report of this reaching the Japanese headquarters, forty men were sent out and fighting followed at 1 p.m. on the 19th east of Changchun and lasted for one hour and twenty minutes, when the Chinese commander Kao appeared on the scene and the Japanese stopped firing.

The Japanese casualties were killed, one officer and twelve men;

CENTER PARTY LAUNCHED AT DINNER IN LONDON

Believed Lloyd George Is To Be Leader Of New Political Group

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 16.—Mr. Winston Churchill, who had just returned from a visit to Mr. Lloyd George, speaking at a parliamentary banquet of the new Central Group, which was attended by a hundred members of the House of Commons, strongly emphasised the necessity for a continuance of the Coalition. The co-operation of the moderate elements was absolutely necessary to combat Bolshevism, he said.

Lord Birkenhead endorsed these remarks and added that the Labor Party had a great part to play in the future. He would like to see it educated by a spell of the same responsibilities as the other parties, thus giving it an opportunity to acquire judgement and balance.

The proposed establishment of a new Center Party has provided a political sensation. The holding of the dinner mentioned only became known when some of the members of the House of Commons who had been present returned to the House and it caused considerable excitement. Mr. Winston Churchill spoke for over an hour and the supporting speakers included the chief Coalition and Unionist whips.

The opinion is expressed that the movement has been successfully launched but its precise attitude towards Labor is leading to some speculations. The diners gained the impression that Mr. Lloyd George will lead this new party.

London, July 17.—The Miners' Conference, by an overwhelming majority, has decided not to give the pledge asked by Mr. Bonar Law in the House of Commons on the 14th that there shall be no stoppages of work for three months.

Made Conditional Offer

London, July 17.—The Miners' Conference has passed a resolution agreeing to co-operate with the Government if the Government will undertake to introduce legislation for the nationalisation of the mines.

Bonar Law's Proposal

London, July 15.—In the House of Commons today, replying to the Labor suggestion that the increase in the price of coal be postponed while the miners co-operated with the Government in an endeavor to increase the output, Mr. A. Bonar Law said that if the miners' leaders gave an assurance that there would be no stoppages or strikes the Government would postpone the increase for three months.

Mr. William Brace and Mr. William Adamson, the Leader of the Labor Party, undertook to lay the proposal before the Miners' Conference, personally recommending it, and to furnish an answer on the 16th.

Mr. A. Bonar Law subsequently agreed to wait for the reply of the Miners' Conference until the 17th. In the meantime, the increase would anyhow be postponed until the 21st. (Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 15.—Speaking to the Peace Treaty Commission of the Chamber of Deputies, M. Pichon repeated that Germany must not be permitted to enter the League of Nations until she has shown good faith. M. Pichon approved the suggestion to assure the efficacy of the League by means of counter armaments and military penalties.

Questions Austrian Treaty

London, July 16.—In the House of Lords today, Viscount Bryce drew attention to the fact that the summary of the terms of Peace offered to Austria included the provision that the frontier of Italy should be advanced to the watershed of the main chain of the Rhaetian Alps and the Brenner Pass, thus transfering to Italy over 200,000 German-speaking Tyrolese. He suggested that a plebiscite should be taken.

Reply Is Made

Lord Newton, Asst. Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said that if this area were taken over as a whole the Italian majority there would be two to one. President Wilson acquiesced in the decision.

The Peace Conference considered that if the area proposed were taken over there would be an overwhelming Italian majority for annexation and therefore it was not necessary to take a plebiscite.

GREAT PEACE PAGEANT IS BEGUN IN LONDON

Celebration Inaugurated By Arrival Of British Fleet At Southend

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—The great Peace pageants were inaugurated by the arrival of the Fleet at Southend this afternoon when four submarines flotillas anchored between Westcliff and Southend Pier, opposite which lie the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th destroyer flotillas with the repair-ship "Assistance" and the flying-ship "Furious," which originally was one of the four famous mystery cruisers, between them and the shore. Thence the dreadnoughts stretch on eastwards in a long line headed by the Queen Elizabeth, the Lion, Tiger, Barham, Valiant, Malaya, Revenge, Royal Oak, Royal Sovereign, King George the Fifth, Erin, Conqueror, Orion, Monarch and Thunderer.

The public will be admitted to practically all these ships except the "Queen Elizabeth."

The ships will be illuminated on the night of the 19th and rockets and deck-flares will be fired from the deck of every ship.

Program Is Complete

London, July 15.—The program for the Victory March through London on July 19, the occasion of the Peace Celebrations, is now completed.

The adoption of alphabetical order for the Allied contingents results in the Americans heading the procession and a composite regiment of 3,400 will march under the leadership of General Pershing along an unusual route; starting from Hyde Park and chiefly proceeding on the south side of the Thames. After them the Belgian contingent and the French, a thousand strong, will follow and then a rather smaller body of Italians, all led by Generals. Then a detachment of Japanese and several other Allies' representatives.

The British Empire forces will march behind the Allied contingents.

Beatty Heads Navy

Admiral Sir David Beatty will head the Navy, and Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig and his generals will lead the army, in which all arms will participate, including the Women's Corps and nurses, with massed standards and colors, bands and pipes. Australasian, South African and Indian forces will also march in the pageant.

One of the most impressive moments will be at Whitehall, where the procession will salute the stately memorial to the dead designed by Sir Edward Lutyens.

Special accommodation to view the procession has been reserved along the route for 4,000 female relatives and children of officers and men who died in the war and also for wounded soldiers.

The London celebrations promise to vie with those of Paris in their great scale and heartiness.

Special services have been organised in the cathedrals, churches and schools and the children will also participate in open-air festivities in the parks. The entertainments will include old English dances, huge concerts and plays.

The Metropolis is unprecedentedly crowded and accommodation is very difficult to obtain.

TIRPITZ PLACES BLAME ON HOLLWEG FOR WAR

Admits Proposal At Start Of War Made By Viscount Grey Might Have Prevented It

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, July 14.—Admiral von Tirpitz's book on the war professes complete innocence of causing the war. While Germany could not expect to overthrow England, he is of opinion that the German navy was strong enough to enable Germany to recuperate after the war, but the revolution upset everything.

Admiral von Tirpitz makes the noteworthy admission that Viscount Grey's proposal at the end of July, 1914, was calculated to prevent the war. He places the whole blame of the war upon Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, the Imperial German Chancellor, to whom the Entente had given the means to peacefully unravel the Servian problem. From the Entente's obvious unwillingness for war Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg concluded that he could take any liberties.

Admiral von Tirpitz states that when he saw the "highly peppered" ultimatum to Servia he was convinced that Great Britain would enter the war and he spoke to Prince Henry, warning him of the danger of awakening a will for war in Great Britain. Great Britain, by the pressure she used in Belgrade, showed she did not want war. She helped Austria to a big diplomatic success and Austria's honor was saved, but Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg considered it diplomatic to incite Austria while, in the eyes of Europe, pretending he knew nothing. This equivocation was not only unworthy but very dangerous.

Admiral von Tirpitz also accuses Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg of an overhasty declaration of war against France and Russia.

CZECH SOLDIERS GUESTS AT DINNER IN KOUKAZA

400 Invalid Veterans Gather At Park; Contingent Sails For Home Today

Four hundred officers and men of the Czecho-Slovak invalid contingent which leaves Shanghai today for Trieste after a week's stay, journeyed to the French Park yesterday afternoon where they were served with refreshments and gave a program of Czecho-Slovak songs and choruses which delighted the considerable number of local residents who were on hand to help in the serving or to attend the community's greeting to the soldier visitors.

Through misunderstanding the program previously announced failed partly to materialise. The men were carried to the park by special tramcars, arriving shortly after 4:30. According to the arrangements as understood by the Czech delegate and officials in charge the soldiers were first to be the guests at tea of the French Community, were then to give a concert and afterward were to be served with dinner by the American Woman's Club, representing the American and allied communities. It appeared, however, that no arrangements had been completed for the first item and the time between their arrival and 7 p.m. was spent by the visitors in giving the delightful program of songs mentioned. A chorus of some fifteen singers gave the bulk of the entertainment and it is a matter of loss to the absentees that there were not more auditors present to hear them.

When it became evident that the preliminary refreshment plan had fallen through the ladies of the Woman's Club proceeded to serve a tasty dinner of cold meats, salads, sandwiches and the like. Through the kindness of the Union Brewery, Messrs. Garner Quelch and Gande Price, beer was served to all, and the B. A. T. furnished 5,000 cigarettes for the occasion.

Toward the conclusion the elements took a whack at the program with a sharp downpour which drove the party from the park lawn where the tables were spread, to shelter.

The Liverpool Maru sails today. She carries with her a comprehensive outfit of necessities and comforts furnished by local organisations and firms and the fund collected by the Allied War Relief Association. Suitable clothing, cigarettes, wines and chocolate for the sick and similar commodities and comestibles in plenty have been furnished.

Report From Sansing

Peking, July 22.—The Customs authorities at Harbin have received the following letter from Mr. Abel dated Sansing July 17.

"After being cut off from all steamers for a considerable period one is now coming up from Lahasusu. As it will doubtless refuse to wait any length of time, this hurried note is written to let you know the latest position here.

"Robbers numbering about 200, all mounted, raided Sansing at daybreak. They burnt the Taoyin's yamen, the Magistracy and the telegraph office.

"I sent all women and children to the shallows early this morning.

"A small party came here and demanded all opium and money. Covered by a revolver, I handed over about sixteen catties of opium, explaining that all money had been sent to Harbin.

"I am remaining here on the Customs, but the premises are threatened in various ways and they will probably take me away for ransom. I refused to accompany them to Shushaie. I hope you can arrange assistance as I am quite helpless but intend to stick it as long as I am allowed.

"Salit, Manoff and Stanishevesky are remaining with me."

The Commissioner of Customs at Harbin adds that the Chinese troops failed to leave on Friday evening and have not yet left.

Debate On Nationalisation

London, July 16.—There was an interesting debate in the House of Lords today on Nationalisation, the majority of the speakers being frankly hostile.

Lord Inchcape declared that nationalisation of the leading industries would reduce Great Britain to the position of a fourth class Power in a few years.

Lord Milner admitted that the situation is serious but he believed we saw the dawn of better things. He was convinced there was an irresistible trend in all countries towards a greater measure of public ownership and control but such control did not mean control from Whitehall. He suggested experimental controlled working of all mines in one area for a month. Lord Milner maintained that there would have been a complete disaster in the later years of the War without control of coal, food and shipping.

China In 1919.

The Commercial Press has put out a special edition of "China in 1919," the anniversary supplement issued by the Peking Leader some months ago. The demand for the edition put out by the Peking Leader itself was so great that it was exhausted and another necessary. For which the Peking Leader is to be congratulated, for the supplement is a work that deserves the widest possible circulation. Dr. Tyau gathered about him a group of brilliant young intellectuals of Peking, who have written of China with the knowledge of both Old and New China and portrayed the transition and interpreted the ideals of the New. For every man who wants to know what these young intellectuals are striving for this book is worth getting. Its price is one dollar.

THE YELLOW LORD

The Yellow Lord. By Will Levington Comfort. George H. Doran Company, New York.

Books like this make us think of Jack London and weep. He could write them so much better.

A far-away Pacific Island, a crazy but worshipped Chinese tea-merchant, three white men, two women and buried treasure—mix them up and you get adventure. This particular mixture by Mr. Comfort has flavor and kick, though it cannot compare with the cocktails Jack London used to shake. Where London's stories are swift and smooth, this is often halt and tangled; where the master's language was smooth, this disciple's style is often labored. As a result, this story lacks the true thrill that its subject might provide.

No comparisons with a greater craftsman can hurt Mr. Comfort, however. He can find plenty of readers for his South Sea tales who never knew Jack London, or have forgotten him. Many persons will delight in this story of Bowditch, the modest man of great strength, who fights for his life and his love against the treacherous but respectable Jerry Comitu, his fellow servant of the Yellow Lord. And when people no longer wish to read it, they will wish to see it on the screen. In this sort of thing there is profit.

Moral: Don't Write Books About China

Peking Dust, by Ellen N. La Motte. The Century Company, New York. G.$1.50.

If you must write a book about China, then by all means write it when you have been here six months. You will see things then in comfortable, stark simplicities that make for easy and, to those who do not know, interesting reading. Do it then, for never again, if you keep your eyes open and your imagination active and healthy, will you be able to see things that way, and your words thereafter will be hesitant, guarded, reserved and therefore unwelcome to the busied publisher's reader, the more busied book reviewer and the yet more busied public, which likes its stuff about China hot and straight. Probably your words will never get that far, if you are an honest workman as well as an imaginative observer, for you will not want to set them down. You will wait for wisdom—the wisdom that, to the Occidental in the East, hardly ever comes. All these pitfalls Ellen La Motte avoided. She put in her six months in China, she saw the things one naturally would see in six months in China, she talked to the people one naturally would talk to in six months in China, she decided the things one naturally would decide in six months in China and she naturally decided to write a book after six months in China, and the kind of book one would naturally write after doing these things.

One must be fair to her, especially one who understands the terrible temptations to writing people in China, more particularly, lesser writing people. She has done some things well. She has come willing to see more than the white man's point of view. She has not come greased with cant. She has seen the irony of the West's pious pretenses and some of the concrete representations of those pretenses. Her book is often keen-cutting, often shrewd, often ably satirical and often, even more often, incredibly silly. Unintentionally and excusably silly, one grants, for she writes in all sincerity and with her limited experience here she could not be expected to see more than the surface or understand that. But silly, nevertheless. At times it sinks to the banal level of a Kansas tourist's letters to his aunt, as when she describes a Chinese feast, which always, she says, begins with bird's nest soup and is concluded with saki. Saki, mind you, saki. And the visit to the President of China—a hundred or so fatuous tourists huddled together by a harried American Minister who must periodically satisfy the lust of the globe-trotters who would save it for their scrapbooks that they saw the President of China! Periodically he squares off his obligations to his peregrinating countrymen, shepherds them into the Palace and exhibits them in groups of eight or nine at a time to the gaze of an equally harried President, who murmurs to each the same bored words, sips one sip of champagne and prays for the end. And at the end the Minister and the President unite in cursing tourists and their tribe. These things certainly Miss La Motte might have spared us between the covers of a volume. They are more appropriate in a Kansas county semi-weekly.

Miss La Motte's narrative is in the form of letters written from Peking in October and November, 1916, and February and March, 1917. She begins with an introductory chapter describing in a few words the state of things in China. The accuracy of that description can be gathered from the fact that she confuses spheres of influence with control and, reciting the spheres of influence, concludes that 79 percent of China is under foreign control. At any rate, a simple picture. Then she proceeds to tell of some of the events of that eventful period. As it includes China's severance of relations with Germany and all the undercurrent of maneuvering that entailed, the Laohsikai affair, the opium scandal over which Feng Kuo-chang presided and the duel between Li Yuan-hung and Tuan Chi-jui, she has colorful material, and much of it is well handled. But all of it is handled with the limited understanding of a tourist and, though accurate in its broad outlines and perhaps informing to those who only want broad outlines, even if somewhat deceptive, to the great irritation of one who lives in China and tries conscientiously to understand the subtle and almost insoluble problems of the contact of East and West. Young American writing people leaving their own side of the Pacific should be put under bond not to write books in their first three years in China. Paper in these straitened times is a valuable commodity.

How Much Use Are Drugs?

Social Work, by Richard C. Cabot. Published by Houghton Mifflin Co. 188 pages. Price, G.$1.50.

Richard Cabot is the most comforting of physicians because he curtails to such an extent the responsibility of both patient and practitioner. The doctor has merely to confirm his belief that he has no medicines which will do the patient a bit of good and the patient need do nothing but wait and discover whether nature intends him to die or get well.

"The vast majority of diseases get well without any help from anybody," writes Dr. Cabot, "and that is the thing we must teach most often and to most people, in season and out of season. In our day and generation few people get a chance of observing that fact, because somebody comes along and gives them a drug. And unless one has seen people get well without any drugs, one continues to believe that it was the last drug given that cured every case of illness one has known to get well. On the other hand, the majority of illnesses that do not get well without drugs will not get well at all. I have mentioned before the figures which seem approximately true in relation to the cure of disease by drugs. Drugs will cure about six or eight diseases out of about 150 known to science. Anybody who fails to give a drug for one of those six or eight diseases is criminally negligent. We should press that drug upon the patient. I do not want anybody to think that I do not believe in drugs. I believe in them tremendously, in the particular cases where they are of use. But I do not stand for the habit of bolstering up people's beliefs that we have drugs all ready to cure most diseases.

"I think the future of cure by drugs is very hopeful. I do not feel hopeless of our discovering drugs for the 142 out of 150 diseases which we still cannot cure. But if we falsely suppose that we have a cure already, we do not hustle around to get it. It is not until we realise that we have not a cure already, that we do hustle around to get it. It is not until we realise that we are now very helpless in medicine that we shall labor in a way to become less so. At present the best that we can do for most patients is to explain what the trouble is, let them know what is going to happen, to preach some hygiene, and above all, to make them realise that we care and suffer with them. That is the essence of medical work and of the social assistant's work in the dispensary and in the home."

Dr. Cabot also does away with most of the "emergencies" for which people used to prepare with themselves home remedies and handy textboods. One such emergency he blasts as follows:

"People frequently consult a doctor because they are afraid of fainting, fainting in church or in the street, for example. In such cases I have found it most effective to say, 'Well, suppose you do—what harm will it do?' From the answers to this question I find generally that the patients have in the back of their minds, unconfessed, unrealised, the fear that if they faint and nothing adequate is done to cure them they will die. They do not know that people who faint come to just as well if they are let alone, and that all the fussing about that is usual when people faint is useful merely to keep the bystanders busy and not to revive the patient."

One of the most interesting chapters describes just how far the social assistant may be used in mental investigation. This is reprinted from a lecture which Dr. Cabot delivered in France and during the course of the lecture he has occasion to criticise American doctors for failure to take full account of the mental factor in disease. This, he holds, has led to its being overemphasised by various lay movements. After paying a compliment to the part which France has played in the investigation of medical psychology the doctor continues:

"In America, on the other hand, the conspicuous disregard of medical psychology by physicians has led to widespread and serious revolt on the part of the public. Our physicians have too often treated the patient as if he were a walking disease, a body without a mind. Medical psychology has been neglected in our medical schools and in the practice of our most successful clinicians. The result has been a revolt on the part of the laity, expressed in the popularity of the heretical healing cults, such as Christian Science and New Thought. These unscientific and unchristian organisations illustrate an error opposite to that of the physicians, but no greater in degree. Indeed, I think that our physicians are more to be blamed than the leaders of these irrational cults, because our physicians, having received a scientific training, ought to be more thorough, more unprejudiced, more devoted to the truth, and, therefore, less inclined to shut their eyes to a huge body of facts. The physician often shuts his eyes to the existence of the mind as a cause of disease. The Christian Scientist shuts his eyes to the existence of the body as a cause of disease. Both are equally and disastrously wrong."

The book is informative enough to be extremely useful to all who are engaged in social work, but it is also interesting enough in substance and in treatment to claim the attention of the more casual reader as well.

THE NERVES AND SUCCESS

Nervousness is the greatest obstacle to success, and it is an enemy of happiness and health. Victims of "nerves" are handicapped, even though in other respects competent, for they lack energy, confidence, coolness, courage and health.

Nervousness is a sign that the nerves are weak and not receiving sufficient nourishment from the blood. The blood is at fault, and if you look at the color of your face, lips and gums you will see you are anaemic as well as nervous.

Healthy blood carries a constant supply of nourishment to the nervous network, feeding the nerves, keeping them toned up and repairing "wear and tear."

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' pink pills makes new blood, and new blood is a necessity if nerve troubles are to be overcome. Dr. Williams' pink pills supply the nerves, through the blood, with the vital elements on which they thrive, and a short course will prove what an invaluable tonic they are in neuralgia, nervous exhaustion, or neurasthenia, St. Vitus' dance and other disorders arising from weak nerves.

They are obtainable from dealers everywhere, also at $1.50 the bottle, $8.00 for six, from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai. Start a course and begin to recover nervous force now. You can obtain a free copy of a useful booklet, "The Nerves and Their Needs," by sending a postcard to the above address.

Masias Allows But One Hit And Filipinos Beat Navy 9-0; Shanghai Plays 15th Today

Filipino South Paw Has Sailors Eating From His Hand While Hopkins Is Found For 11 Hits With Total Of 20

Lefty Masias worked so well yesterday that two Navy batters reached third base. He allowed one hit and fanned seven while his team mates were clouting the ball to the seven corners of the Race Course bagging 11 hits for a total of 20 off Hopkins. Two doubles, a like number of triples, a home run and six singles showed that the Filipinos were hitting. The Navy was beaten 9-0 and Henderson tossed away the only opportunity the sailors had for a tally by refusing to slide home.

The game was listless because of the miserable fielding by the Navy nine. Grenier misjudged two flies in left that gave Barnes and Ylanan three base hits while Hunt, Hopkins, Mack, Lyons and Henderson contributed errors.

The fielding features were credited to DeChaves and Kolander. The former made a great gloved-hand stab of Brunner's hard-hit liner, the last out of the game, and Kolander, in addition to making two nice catches in deep left, held Birtulpo to two bases after the Filipino right fielder had banged one to the Gold Club.

Masias Has Big Day

Masias had things all his own way. Of the 26 sailor batters to face him, 24 died before they reached second base and one was caught at the plate because he failed to slide. In every inning except the second, when errors by DeChaves and Masias allowed runners on, the Navy team died in order. The sailors didn't have a chance.

The Filipinos had little trouble in scoring, earning six of the nine tallies. All the runs were made in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh innings, the sailors nipping two at the plate in the eighth. Every man on the Philippine team made a run with the exception of Masias. Colixto made a couple. DeChaves was the only man on his club who failed to get at least one hit.

Up to the fourth it was a pretty fair game. Ylanan landed on Mack's error in the session, stole second, made third on Hopkins slipup and scored on Birtulpo's infield out. Hunt holding the ball too long before making the peg after touching first.

Three More In Fifth

Colixto led off in the fifth and was passed, scoring on Barnes' triple. Masias flied out to Hunt. Lorenzo singled, scoring Barnes. He went to third when Grenier threw over Wood's head. Ylanan hit over Grenier's head for three bases, Grenier horribly misjudging the ball. He had misjudged Barnes' triple earlier in the inning and was yanked, Kolander going to left. Lorenzo scored on Ylanan's clout.

Lyons dropped DeChaves' high fly in the sixth and Colixto followed with a single. The pair pulled a double steal. Barnes fanned. Wood dropped the third strike and DeChaves scored when Hunt's return to the plate was high. Colixto scored on Masias scratch hit through Hopkins. Filipinos 6, Navy, 0.

Two Doubles And A Homer

Steil and Birtulpo doubled and Gonzales hit for a circuit in the seventh, the combination calling for three runs. The session ended the scoring although Barnes and Masias singled in the eighth. With Barnes on second, Lorenzo hit to Henderson. The latter shot the ball to Mack for the force out at third and Mack dropped the ball. Barnes over-ran the sack, however, and was run down between third and home, Masias going to third and Lorenzo to second on the play.

Ylanan hit to Henderson and Masias was out at the plate on a beautiful play, Henderson to Wood. Steil ended the inning with a fly to right field.

The box score:

COUNT SAVINE SENTENCED TO SERVE PRISON TERM

Is Ordered To Jail By Mixed Court For Insulting Russian Officials

Count C. T. L. de Savine, whose nationality, uniform and title were the subjects of proceedings in the Mixed Court early this month, was sent to the Municipal jail for a term of one month and a half yesterday following his conviction in the Mixed Court on charges of insulting Russian government officials. The case was heard by Russian Assessor Ivanoff and Magistrate Tsang. The court further ordered that he be expelled from the Settlement after he serves the sentence.

Court de Savine, described in the charge sheet as an unrecognised Russian, has been living in Woosung since his previous appearance in the Mixed Court and was arrested at 65 North Szechuen Road by Detective Inspector Reeves after the latter had secured a despatch warrant countersigned by the Chinese authorities and after search had been made for him in the Woosung hotels.

After evidence of arrest the Assessor stated to the prisoner that in spite of the warning given at the previous trial he had sent pamphlets to a certain local paper and to the Registrar of the Mixed Court, insulting the Russian Consul-General at Shanghai and the Russian Minister to Peking, and that he had asked the Registrar to forward the Russian copies of the pamphlet to the local Russian lawyers and the Russian Minister.

In reply, the prisoner said that although he did send a copy to the newspaper, he did not send any to the Registrar. He sent out many letters, and the pamphlets might have been sent to the Registrar by mistake. He also admitted having sent one to the Russian Minister by way of complaint.

The Assessor stated that the prisoner, not being a Russian, had no right to address the Russian Minister. To this the accused said that he simply asked him to investigate the question of his nationality. He added that he could not get away from Shanghai because none of the shipping companies would give him a ticket. He asked that the court order the police to take him on board the next available boat for Vladivostok.

Asked where he got the nine gold watches found in his possession, the Count said that he had purchased them from pawn brokers and was going to sell them in Vladivostok for profit.

Detective Inspector Reeves stated that the hotel in which the accused was staying in Woosung was under Italian management and suggested that his room be visited by the police subject to the approval of the Italian Consulate, to search for a box containing certain documents.

The court then pronounced its sentence and ordered that the libellous pamphlets be destroyed while all documents found in his possession be handed over to the Russian Consulate for transmission to the Russian Military Agent at Shanghai. The court added that if accused was owing the hotel in Woosung any money the nine gold watches could be sold to pay the debt.

Demote Two Officials For Arsenal Explosion

As a punishment for their negligence in allowing the explosion of the powder magazine of the second battalion of the fourth brigade situated between the Lunghua Admiralty House and the Rifle Butt early this month, two military officers in charge of the depot were ordered to be demoted yesterday. Commander Liang Yu-liang, of the second battalion, was placed on the Acting Commander list while Brigadier-General Wang, of the Fourth Division, was given one demerit. The punishment has been duly approved by the Ministry of War.

Authorise Dredging Of Hongkew Creek

Correspondence in the Municipal Gazette announces that the Council has decided to dredge the Hongkew Creek, particularly the portion between Yuhang Road bridge and Kashing Road bridge, where in times of low tide boat traffic is held up. The estimated cost of dredging is Tls. 3,500 and though there is no special appropriation in the budget for the work, in view of the fact that it has become a matter of urgent public necessity the operations have been authorised.

Attention was directed to the matter by petitions from the Chinese pork dealers, whose live stock is brought up the creek and in times of low tide must be unloaded some distance downstream and driven through the streets. The Chinese have dredged the creek in the territory adjoining the Settlement.

Britain Will Remove Censorship Of Cables

Restrictions Will Be Lifted After July 23, Announced In Commons

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 16.—In the House of Commons today Mr. H. W. Forster stated that the cable censorship would be abolished at midnight on the 23rd, after which date private codes would be permitted.

Report Made In Commons

London, July 17.—During the debate on the Postoffice Estimates, in the House of Commons today Mr. R. H. Illingworth, Postmaster-General, stated that there was rather less delay on the cables, except to Egypt and Australia, but they were suffering from overmuch traffic and frequent interruptions.

The normal capacity of these cables, he said, was 253,000 words daily, but conditions had led to a reduction to 157,000 daily. The Government traffic was eighteen times greater than before the War and now occupied 25 percent of the total capacity of the Eastern Cables.

He estimated the abolition of the censorship and the introduction of private codes on July 23 would decrease the traffic between 20 to 30 percent, although the cable companies estimated more. Nobody regretted more than the cable companies, he said, the great inconvenience business men had experienced, which made the transaction of business with the East almost impossible.

KOO AND WANG WANTED AS LEAGUE DELEGATES

Nine Local Bodies Nominate Them To Fight Diplomatic Battle

Dr. Wellington Koo and Dr. C. T. Wang, China's peace delegates to Paris, were nominated yesterday by nine local organisations to be China's representatives at the League of Nations. The nominations were made in a telegram addressed to the Peking administration and the Canton Government. The message pointed out that as Mr. Lu Cheng-hsiang, the senior delegate, was instrumental in putting through certain Japanese deals and in view of his weak health, he should not be appointed to the League.

The telegram says in part:

"Just how effectively China can secure back the privileges yielded to Germany will depend largely on her representation at the League of Nations. The heavy responsibility would, therefore, fall upon the shoulders of her plenipotentiaries. B sides, the Shantung question will involve the sovereignty of the nation and require a great deal of uphill fight. Unless care is used in the selection of the envoys, the diplomatic battle can not be won.

"The actions of Messrs. Koo and Wang have met with the approval of all the Allies and the endorsement of the nation. If they are appointed to the posts, they will be the most competent to serve in the capacity.

"Following a public meeting held by the various organisations we agree in our views in selecting them. Therefore we join in this message to ask the Northern and Southern authorities to appoint them formally in order to strengthen the diplomatic standing and to yield to public will."

The telegram was signed by the Kiangsu Educational Association, the Western Returned Students' Union, the Chinese Y.M.C.A., the Shanghai Christians' Union, the Vocational Educational Association, the Overseas Chinese Association, the Shanghai City Educational Association, the World Chinese Students' Federation and the Shanghai Nantao Fire Brigade.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better."
JOHN J. LEFFA, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.

"I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."
A. F. PEELER, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"For several years I recommended your 'Castoria' and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."
EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., New York City.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm."
EDWARD PARRISH, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies."
VICTOR H. COFFMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."
J. A. PARKER, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

Banking Service with AMERICA —direct and personal

EXPORTERS or importers now engaged in, or thinking of, trade with America would do well to consider not only the special nature of our facilities, but also the personal interest we take in every one of our customers' transactions.

First of all, we offer direct banking service—without intermediary dealings, or unnecessary delays.

Equally important is our personal service. Every transaction is followed through, both here and in America, by our own representatives with a personal interest, the value of which is evident in the service rendered.

May we talk with you about America?

Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland and Fearon write as follows in their weekly exchange circular:

Exchange:—The London price of silver is ¾d. up during the week to 54⅞d. due to the fall in the New York-London cross-rate. The price of silver in America after a rise, has again fallen to G. $1.03¾ per oz. pure. From this it would appear that only the low cross-rate keeps the London price up and any adjustment on a higher basis would bring lower silver in London.

Our market, with the falling stock of sycee has ruled very firm for early delivery and 1¼d. to 2¼d. over the quotations recorded below for T.T. on London has been paid for cash. This position has also influenced settlements of export paper and resales of T.T. on London. It is probable that arrivals of stocks of silver, which commence with about oz. 5,000,000 due on the 25th inst., will relieve this position and easier rates may be expected within the next month.

The local stock of sycee and bar silver at Tls. 16,130,000 is again about Tls. 2,000,000 down. The stock of Mexican and Chinese dollars at $13,820,000 is practically unchanged.

The Coal Industry In England And Business Ethics

IT is wise to reserve judgment on the wave of excitement in England over the increase in the price of coal supposedly necessitated by the raise in miners' wages and shorter working hours. It may be true that such a raise in wages and curtailment of the working day does necessitate an increase of six shillings in the price of coal, and if it is true, then the cost of production in all British industries will also be increased and British trade handicapped in competition with that of foreign countries. But until more detailed figures on costs of production can be had there is ground for skepticism. American experience bids one be wary of quick conclusions. Bringing the weight of public opinion to bear against labor by raising prices on the pretext of higher wages has been a favorite stratagem of big American enterprises since the era of great corporations.

Instances leap to mind. When the railroads a few years ago were forced by the Railway Brotherhoods to raise the wage scale they also put up freight rates. The increase in wages added, say, five percent to their operation costs. They put up the rates—or asked the government's permission to put them up—ten percent, thus passing the wage increase on to the public and making a neat little profit on the deal; bewailing the while the sad lot of the railroad shareholder and the shocking encroachments of labor. So, too, with the tariff. A new tariff schedule goes into effect, fixing an import duty of five percent on a certain commodity. The corporations handling that commodity raise its price, as they are quite justified in doing, but they raise it not five percent, but ten, also making a little profit. And the public, the long-suffering public—it gets done in the eye as usual. It is one of the gentle, Christian ways of Big Business.

It is not meant to say that this is the case with the coal industry in the United Kingdom. The higher prices may be necessary; though even so it must be borne in mind that there are other factors entering into the increase than higher wages and shorter hours. The destruction of capital in war, the suspension of production and the derangement of the machinery of production and distribution must also be taken into consideration. But one will have to see a careful analysis of cost accounting for the mines before one accepts the higher price as necessary, and not to the profit of the mine owners. It must be borne in mind that a skillful and extended propaganda is being organised to defeat the proposed nationalisation of the industry recommended by the recent government commission and a raise in price, under whatever guise, makes effective propaganda with the public. It touches the sensitive nerves of the public pocketbook, and under those circumstances the public is not always discriminating in analysing causes and in placing blame.

'Prophecy' Made Good

To those who doubt the wisdom of Sophocles and still believe in modern necromancy, recent events in aviation, culminating in the crossing of the Atlantic Ocean, will seem to be another verification of the famous "prophecy" of Mother Shipton, supposed to have been made in the time of the Tudors, late in the fifteenth century, and part of which was:

Carriages without horses shall go,
And accidents fill this world with woe.
Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye.
Waters shall yet more wonders do.
Now strange, shall yet be true.
Through hills man shall ride.
And no horse or ass be at h's side.
Under water men shall walk.
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk.
In the air men shall be seen,
In white, in black, in green.

Unfortunately, however, for the idol worshippers, the Mother Shipton "prophecy" was just a hoax, to which Charles Hindley confessed in 1873. Richard Head wrote in 1684 a "Life and Death of Mother Shipton," in which he endeavored to prove the existence some two centuries previously of a seeress who, among other things, had foretold the death of Cardinal Wolsey. He did not succeed in establishing to the satisfaction of later investigators that she ever lived at all. But the wonderful prophecy in question collapses under the weight of Hindley's own story. Hindley reprinted Head's book in 1862, and garbled it. The prophecy in question was Hindley's and not Mother Shipton's, and was made in a spirit of jest. He no more laid claim to supernatural gifts than would H. G. Wells.

Another of the bogus Mother Shipton prophecies menaced a village in Somerset, England, with destruction by earthquake and flood in 1879, and was so widely believed that hundred of families abandoned their homes on the eve of the expected disaster, while spectators swarmed in from far around to see the town destroyed. The willingness of some persons to be humbugged, notwithstanding experience, was shown by the fact that, although the prophecy for 1879 failed completely, the fradulent lines supplied by Hindley—

As this world to an end shall come

caused great alarm throughout England and even in other countries in that year, and resulted in the moving of many thousands of persons from their homes into the fields. The tendency of the credulous to sever all home ties on the supposed approach of the crack of doom has never been satisfactorily explained by the psychologists.

Flying has fulfilled the last of the so-called prophecies of the famous, but probably nonexistent, old witch, except those to which reference has been made. Forecasting the death of Wolsey, if, indeed, it was one at all, ought not to have been difficult in the troublous time in which Wolsey lived. Some of the other "prophecies" already had come to pass when Hindley wrote his forgery of Head's book. Aeronautics had reached a primitive stage of development half a century before Hindley wrote, and no fewer than fourteen submarines had been patented in England prior to 1727. Hindley was not even a man of imagination. He was merely a practical joker who fooled more credulous people than any other man in his century.

Roman Doctor's Cure-All

Cold cream is not a modern toilet requisite. The first formula for it is attributed to Galen, who lived in the second century. Dr. John A. Foote, in a communication to the National Geographic Society, tells that fact and gives some interesting information about drugs and doctors.

"Emperor Frederick II. of Sicily," he writes, "in 1240 or 1241 published the first Pure Food and Drugs act. He was about 700 years ahead of Dr. Wiley, for he specified strict regulations of the standard of drug purity and provided for drug inspectors and fined all offenders.

"Mithradatium was the name of the great antidote of Roman pharmacy. It had from forty to fifty vegetable ingredients, few of which had any real medicinal value except opium, and these drugs were blended with honey.

"It remained for Nero's physician, Andromachus, to put the finishing touches to this wonderful compound. Andromachus added viper's flesh to the formula and called his new compound Theriaca. He wrote some verses dedicated to Nero, describing this medicine and claiming virtues for it which in our day would subject him to prosecution under the anti-trust act. Evidently he believed he had created in this one compound a veritable pharmaceutical monopoly.

"Galen, one of the fathers of medicine, went even further. He recommended it as a cure for all poisons, bites, headaches, vertigo, deafness, epilepsy, apoplexy, dimness of sight, loss of voice, asthma, coughs, spitting of blood, tightness of breath, colic, the iliac passion, (appendicitis,) jaundice, hardening of the spleen, stone, fevers, dropsy, leprosy, melancholy, all pestilences, etc. Nowadays he would probably have included coupon thumb, golf shoulder, and movie eye.

"As Galen's writings dominated medical thought for 1,500 years, it is not surprising that this advertisement made Mithradatium, or Theriaca, a valued remedy. Every physician of note for centuries afterward claimed some improvement on the original formula."

German Psychology Not Unfathomable

Victories Half Century Ago Simply Turned Nation's Head, Says Medical Scientist

Too much has been made of the alleged unfathomable mystery of the German psychology, of the incomprehensible and all too often grotesque working of the German mind, says a distinguished American medical authority in American Medicine. Throughout the war there had been a tendency on the part of the shrewdest thinkers among the Allies to throw up their hands in despair at the amazing antics of the German process of logic and to confess that science is baffled in the presence of such unparalleled methods of thinking. Now once more there is a general throwing up of hands, a general confession of inability to understand the mystery of the German mind. The occasion is the protest of German scholars against the treatment of some of their colleagues in the University of Strassburg at the hands of the French command. Some of these scholars, it is said, have been forced to leave the university on twenty-four hours' notice on the order of the French authorities; and German scholars have lodged a complaint with the rector of the University of Upsala, Sweden, on the ground that such dismissal is prejudicial to the interests of science. They appeal to university men the world over to rally to the defense of science—and their colleagues.

This appeal has been made public, and Dr. Butler, president of Columbia University, has replied to it. In this reply he shows amazement at the impudence of the German scholars. The memory of Louvain, still fresh in the minds of all students, the memory of so many outrages and atrocities against art and culture still unforgotten, he voices his astonishment that these German scientists can have the hardihood to speak in the name of scholarship in protesting against the unjust treatment of their comrades. Have they so soon forgotten the cruelties suffered at the hands of the German militarists, cruelties which were never protested by the German scientists who seem to be shocked by Allied irreverence for culture? The world is once more puzzled to understand the strange composition of the German brain.

And yet we can conceive nothing quite as simple (as pathetically simple) as the German psychology. It is amazing that it is so little understood. Ever since the victories of 1864, 1866 and 1870-1871, the German nation has been nurtured on the belief that it is the chosen of God, that it is the superhuman of nations. The philosophy of Nietzsche was the philosophy of every individual; the ideal of the cruel "blond beast" was the ideal of every German. The race was to the fleet, the combat to the strong, and heaven pity him who showed the slightest trace of Christian sympathy, of hesitation and weakness. These were the vices of modern civilisation which the superman must avoid. He must not fear cruelty, he must crush under heel anything or anyone that rises in h's path. Infatuated with this philosophy, infatuated with the flattering belief that he was the triumphant symbol of the philosophy, the German swung flamboyantly onward toward his great destiny. And, for more than forty years, he was able to make good his bluff because he was never challenged. It was a noble attitude and a brave one, guaranteed not to fade or shrink—but the first rain that came reduced it to a mere pulp of fabric and dye.

The war lost, the bubble of boastfulness pricked, the superhuman squirming under the heel of the conquering dwarf, and his bravado and superiority disappeared, he was revealed for what he was, a cowering bully, trapped in the debris of his false philosophy, without even the courage of his vices, unashamed of his yowling complaint at the slightest threat to handle him with anything but kid gloves. If only he would take his medicine like a man! It will never be forgotten that the German scholars, from the very first, rallied to the support of the militarists and became the spokesmen of German culture, which was to sweep the world, laying low everything that stood in its way. In a formal appeal to the civilised world in September, 1914, Germany's leading professors announced themselves as standing solidly behind the militarists and their aims. Throughout the war they were the apologists for all the atrocities committed by the war machine. In the Allied countries, on the other hand, the men of science were constantly working to keep the military leaders to a high idealism without which they could never accept the war. This "prostitution of scholarship and science," as Dr. Butler calls it, will remain forever as an accusation against the leaders of German thought. The record of the Allied scholars is clean. The proper attitude of the German scholars, in view of their past is one of meek humble silence.

Le Matin Of Paris Turns On Clemenceau

The Matin, which for several months has been a severe critic of Peace Conference methods and the secrecy of the French Government comes out this morning with a strong personal attack upon Clemenceau. Part of its ground for resentment, no doubt, is the recent attempt of a subordinate official of the French War Office to prosecute a member of the Matin's business staff. That incident itself is of no importance except as the Paris press sees in it an effort of the Government to retaliate against the journal for becoming the Opposition paper.

"A year ago," says the Matin, "no paper praised Clemenceau more than this journal. We served him because he served France. His tenacity, his harsh aggressiveness, his confidence in himself, his willingness to sacrifice everything to the end to be accomplished, his habit of laughing at misfortune, even his insensibility, were all factors for victory. And this glory cannot be taken from him. We are as willing to recall it today as we are unwilling to lose the sense of justice.

"Triumph came, a triumph he did not accomplish alone, for the heroism of our troops, the valor of our commanders, the sacrifice of 1,700,000 dead counted in the total. But in this triumph he had his large part and received from it the principal honor.

"But what has happened since? This conqueror has not understood his victory, because all his life he has lacked a true knowledge of France. The Old Man again finds himself, as in his youth, when he was crossed by disasters and influenced by the break-up of the Commune, avenging himself for humiliation with skepticism.

"At the end of 1918 there came from America and England echoes of the same cry: 'How great is France! May she always remain so for the safety of us all!'

"Young nations delivered, old nations reborn, declared that it was with France as a center that the New Europe must be formed, because France was the guide of civilisation. How often we have heard in the last seven months such words from statesmen, these words which little by little have been extinguished by regrets!

"Never in the world's history has any other chief of State had the prestige which Clemenceau had last November. What has he done with it? As if nothing had changed since 1882, he has not known how to deal with England on equal terms, and with Wilson he has passed from the exaggeration of irony to the exaggeration of feebleness. At the Peace Conference he is at one moment, to use his own expression, put in a hole; at another he sparkles with witticisms which determine nothing. Contrary to the generous traditions of France, he amuses himself by humiliating small nations which have counted upon his support. He has discouraged his coworkers by refusing to read their reports and by imagining that he alone could improvise the peace.

"He ignores for the most part modern problems. The importance of financial and economic questions always escapes him. Moreover, he surrounds himself only with mediocre or self-seeking men. He has eliminated Foch from the debates on military guarantees. When the summary of the treaty of peace brought disillusion, he saw in the sadness of thoughtful men only an affront to himself.

"In the same measure that there is absence of French policy in international affairs, Clemenceau, without an attempt to solve them, allows the difficulties of our domestic affairs to increase. The financial policy of his Government consists only in proposing, then rejecting, one after another, the projects for loans and taxes. He begins by declaring that Germany must pay, only to prove later on that she should not pay.

"His economic policy abandons to themselves liberated regions, where always the complaints of the martyred populations increase, and leaves to the hazard of circumstances the work of increasing production and diminishing the cost of living.

"We had desired that Clemenceau, in negotiating with our Allies, support himself upon public opinion, as formerly he was supported by the heroism of the soldiers, but he has despised that public opinion. Clemenceau, lost in his solitude, has taken the disapproval of the country as a crime of lese-majeste. He has come to believe that France begins and ends in him. Rather than rally the people about him on a program of national rebirth, he has preferred, as a monarch by divine right, to use police methods. He has decided, doubtless, upon advice of his detestable counselors, to exploit his glory, which was great, to satisfy his personal spites, which are petty. And so, unhappily, he now wastes the victory of France."

Landor Again

(New York Times)

In the Literary Supplement of The London Times a correspondent summarises or reprints letters written to that paper by Walter Savage Landor in his old age and not known to John Foster, author of the "standard biography" of that great writer and greater character. When he was a youth at Cambridge Landor fired a gun through a Tory's window. Perfectly polite in his manners, he was delightfully violent in his conversation. Of that side of him Lawrence Boythorn in "Bleak House" is a memorial. When the coach was late, Boythorn-Landor cried:

"By heaven, this is a most infamous coach! It is the most flagrant example of an abominable public vehicle that ever encumbered the face of the earth. It is twenty-five minutes after the time this afternoon. The coachman ought to be put to death."

He was sweet as Summer to the ladies. When he was in the eighties, Browning said of him that "the thing he really loves is a pretty girl to talk nonsense with." Visiting Rome in 1862, he longs for the red shirt "about the ardent breast of Garibaldi." A French Bishop offers the landlord three crowns a day for the lodging for which Landor was paying two. Landor will not put up with the infamous outrage. Before night he is in the train for Civita Vecchia. On the way a chance acquaintance shares three flasks of Orvieto with the youth of 87.

Thomas Allsop, a friend of the Lambs, to whom Charles sent the famous invitation, "Leg of lamb, as before, hot at four, and the heart of Lamb forever," had written a letter saying that he "would double the sum offered by Landor to the man who should perform an act of justice to that most wretched caitiff," Napoleon III, "and so end the system. He must be killed." It was the time of the Orsini bomb. In a letter to The Times Landor said that he never "countenanced any assassination whatsoever. Assassination I consider as the basest of crimes, tyrannicide as the sublimest of virtues, it being self-immolation for a man's native country. Beyond that country it would be murder."

In Landor's view at least, this distinction between tyrannicide and assassination was important and logical. Allsop may have had in mind Landor's offer of $475 to the family of the first patriot who would perform an act of tyrannicide. He told Emerson that he made this offer after reading Garibaldi's story of the shooting by the Austrians of Angelo Brunetti. "'Vengeance is mine,' says God, but God in His omnipotence may use as His engine of vengeance one animated atom," wrote Landor to The Times. He was an aristoratic radical and republican, like his admirer Swinburne. "I detest and abominate democracy, the destroyer of republics. The political system requires an immovable center."

More congenial to the present mood of the world is the old man's constant disgust with the Germans. "Excuse my use," he wrote, "of the world 'element,' now so common upon all occasions when I express the fear that the German element is more potent among us than it ever was before." Of a royal engagement he said characteristically, "Gracious God! Have we not already had enough of Germans?" And he spoke of the King of Prussia as a man "in whose family there never was a gentleman." One likes to see him in his old age seeking aid for the descendants of Shakespeare's sister, Mrs. Joan Hart, and for James Defoe, great-grandson of Daniel, of whom he writes:

"He stimulated to enterprise those colonies of England which extend over every sea, and which carry with them the spirit and language that will predominate through the world. Achilles and Homer will be forgotten before Crusoe and Defoe."

It is interesting to learn that Landor's ancestors on the mother's side may have been kin to the Shakespeares. "In 1605 one Lorance Savage of Tachbrooke, in Warwickshire, the home of his mother's people, married a Joane Shaxper of the same parish."

What Birds Can Learn In A Lifetime

By Philip Burmingham

A parrot can easily be taught to say "Polly wants a cracker" and "Pretty Polly." A crow, if you slit his tongue, will ejaculate human sounds. But birds of any kind are the most difficult creatures in the world to train as trick performers. All the more remarkable, then, is the talented staff of trick cockatoos and macaws which Mr. Clyde Phillips recently presented at the American roof and vaudeville show.

Mr. Phillips has been in the show business, in one form or another, all his life. He has trained all sorts of beasts, birds and fishes, to perform for the delight of American audiences all over the country. The act he is presenting now is a bird act—"Naynon's Birds," it is called. He finally settled on birds in preference to dogs, bears or elephants, because, as he says, though a bird is the most difficult of God's creatures to train, with the possible exception of a fish, when once you have him trained you have an act that is going to last you a lifetime; for the life of a tropical bird is anywhere from sixty to one hundred and twenty-five years.

When I saw Mr. Phillips's birds wheel baby carriages about the stage, hang from trapezes, make startling mathematical calculations—when I saw one beautiful macaw, a dream of gorgeous colors, allow Mr. Philips to handle him freely and twist him into various beautiful styles for ladies hats—when I saw all this, and bethought myself of a parrot I had once tried to handle and been severely bitten on the thumb in consequence—I felt a vast curiosity to learn.

"The secret of training all animals is the same," said Mr. Phillips. "Patience and ceaseless care, untiring repetition of each little detail day after day and month after month, until the animal learns by repetition what is required of him and does it automatically. The only difference in the case of birds as opposed to most other creatures is that it takes so much longer to train them. I have spent seven years teaching one of my cockatoos one trick, and that a simple one.

"During that turbulent period of Spanish history when revolutions were the order of the day and republic followed monarchy in rapid succession, there was a man in Madrid who owned a parrot. He had taught his bird to say very prettily "Long live the King." Then came the revolution. With infinite care and vast patience the man taught the parrot to say "Long live the Republic." It took him a long time to do it, and it was scarcely done when behold! the Republic passed away, and to be heard saying "Long live the Republic" was treason to the King. The man set to work again, and at last he got his parrot back to "Long live the King." But, alas! the king did not live long, there was another revolution, and the Republic came back. Then the man took that parrot and wrung its neck. He was a good parrot and it was a pity to lose him, but he was not sufficiently versatile to keep up with Spanish politics of the day.

"That illustrates the great patience necessary to succeed in training birds. They do not reason, they only have the power of imitation on which you may work. Also there is no such thing as starting with a bird already domesticated, for tropical birds will not breed in captivity, so every cockatoo and macaw in my act was wild when I started on him—and there is nothing wilder or more timid in the world than an untamed bird. It took years sometimes before they would even allow me to touch them. With the beautifully colored macaw that now lets me twist him into a hat every day, it took five years of patient work before he would permit me to handle him at all. As you see him today, perfectly docile, absolutely confident and trusting, it has taken me twenty-eight years of worry to achieve. That bird is a wonder. He must be fifty years old, but he will probably live another fifty. I don't know what I should do if I lost him. For all my other birds I have understudies but I could never get an understudy for him.

"The mathematical bird?" Mr. Phillips smiled. "No, of course he can't do arithmetic, but I can. I spent eight years training him to ring that bell, with the answer, and to stop ringing it at a certain signal. The signal is the secret. The audience cannot see it, but the bird sees it, and now he very seldom makes a mistake."

Mr. Phillips had a cockatoo that shouldered the Stars and Stripes and marched in perfect time across the stage to the tune of "Marching Through Georgia." Did that bird appreciate the time in music?

"No," said Mr. Phillips. "If I let him alone he would march all right, but he would march anyhow, all out of time. I have trained him to lift his foot and bring it down when I bring down the little baton in my hand, and the orchestra of course takes the time from me. It took many years of patient work to get that cockatoo to step in time with my baton. I first took his two feet in my hands, and, while someone else handled the baton, I raised his feet one after the other. Then I kept only one finger on his foot, and finally removed the finger altogether. The bird was then marching to the beat of the baton. I then introduced the music. The music means nothing to the bird, it is only the baton that he watches; but to the audience it looks as though it were the music he was following.

"Tropical birds are expensive," said Mr. Phillips. "These cockatoos are worth about two hundred and fifty dollars each, and they require a great deal of care. I have to keep a special man to look after them all the time, for they will not allow any one to handle them unless they are accustomed to that person. But now they are all thoroughly domesticated and are regular household pets, very beautiful and very amusing pets."

Sparing The Child vs. Sparing The Rod

By Winifred Black

What are you going to do to keep the average schoolboy from turning into a Bolshevist when he grows up?

Reason with him or whip him?

That's what they discussed at the National Education Association in Chicago the other day.

A woman from New York said that you spoiled the child if you ever let him see the rod. And a man from Buffalo declared that a boy who was never whipped never really had a chance to grow up to be a real man.

Both of these persons were experienced educators.

What are you and I, just everyday mothers and fathers, going to do about it? Which side are you on?

I'm with the woman from New York, and I'm afraid the reason I'm with her is that I am a conceited person with a dear love for my own self-respect. And I've always thought that if I didn't have sense enough and tact enough and patience enough and character enough to control a human being with less than half my age and experience, without resorting to physical force, might as well go out and harness myself up with the horses or shut myself in with the cattle, and be a plain brute once and for all, and be done with it.

I would never admit even to myself that a little bit of a boy, or a little bit of a girl either, had so much more character and more will power and more reason than I, that the only way I could manage them was to take a whip to them.

It doesn't take physical strength to rule children and make them mind. It takes common sense and a love of justice, and a love and understanding of children.

The mother who lets her children rule her is the worst enemy the children will ever have.

She is bringing them up with no real knowledge of the real conditions which they will have to face when they grow up.

A spoiled child is almost sure to turn out to be an unhappy man or a miserable woman.

Whenever I see a selfish, self-centered, egotistical, cold-hearted husband, I know that that man was a spoiled child.

Whenever I see a selfish, capricious, self-indulgent woman I believe that I see a woman who was once a spoiled child. And I blame her mother or her father or her grandmother or her aunt for a great deal of the misery she inflicts upon herself and upon others.

I have never yet in my life seen a high-tempered, discontented morbid man, or a stubborn, tempestuous-hearted woman that there was not somewhere behind them a history of brutality, brutally inflicted in childhood, somewhere and by some one in what was supposed to be authority.

When you whip a timid, nervous, sensitive child you break the spirit of that child, and when he is grown to be a man he will be timid, sensitive and broken-spirited, and you will wonder why he doesn't get on better in the world.

When you whip a high-spirited, courageous, strong-natured child, you turn that child into a bitter-hearted rebel, hating you for your cruelty and laying up that hatred in his heart like an evil cancer that will eat and eat until there's nothing but the cancer left.

When I see women in the street car jerking their children into the car and throwing them into the seats—not because the child has done anything wrong, but because they themselves are in a hurry or out of patience—I don't wonder that the world is full of ill-natured, ill-conditioned people today.

When I see another kind of the same sort of self-indulgent mother, who fattens her own vanity at the expense of her child's character and lets the child make a disagreeable nuisance of itself, and pester everybody within hearing distance nearly to death with impudent questions and impertinent remarks, I don't wonder that the prisons and the poorhouses are full to overflowing.

Bring up the children? There are a good many of us who don't bring children up at all—we bring them down.

Down from the beautiful world in which the natural child lives so beautifully and so simply, and with so much love and trust—down into our mean, little, selfish, silly, ill-tempered, spiteful world.

Spare the child and let the rod spoil—that's the motto I believe in every time.

Law And Eggs

At Westminster County court before Judge Lush recently, an action to recover £6 15s for fried eggs supplied at breakfast was brought by Faulkner's Hotels against Frederick Thorold Dickson. The defendant set up a counter claim for not receiving proper notice to leave, says The London Times.

Mr. Sharp, for the plaintiffs, said that the defendant was a barrister who had been employed in a government department, and had stayed at Faulkner's Hotel in Villiers Street, Charing Cross, from May 27 last year as a daily guest until January 41. There were two tariffs—one at 5s 6d. for bed and plain breakfast, and the other at 6s for bed and breakfast on anything one liked. The defendant took the 5s 6d tariff. While the manager was absent through illness for six weeks a waiter for some reason put a fried egg each morning before defendant, who ate it without question. When the manager returned the defendant was asked to pay a reasonable sum for all the eggs he had eaten, and he refused. Correspondence followed in which the defendant wrote, "Regarding the conversation about the egg, I wish to settle in a reasonable manner. I did not order it, but it was welcome to me because I work long hours every day in a government office." (Laughter.) He also wrote "Re fried egg. Please inform your employers that I regard the sum as outrageous. I did not order the egg, and am under no legal obligation to pay."

Judge Lush said that the supplying of the egg went on for a considerable time before the defendant was spoken to, and he might therefore have considered he was justified in accepting it as part of the meal. The defendant, on the other hand, could not succeed in his counter claim, and therefore both claim and counter claim would be dismissed.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Egg Drying Machinery

The Milk Drying Machinery Co., of Chicago, Ill., U. S. A., who have sold a number of egg-drying machines throughout China, will open an office and wareroom in Shanghai in the near future, where both the single and the double unit machines will be kept in stock, which will insure immediate deliveries.

There will also be kept on hand furnaces, pumps and all extra parts which may be needed to repair worn or damaged sections of the machinery.

The office will be in charge of Mr. A. F. Doyle, of Chicago. A uniform c. i. f. price will be quoted to all importing firms, and to our special representative, through which channels our machines will be sold.

The erection of the machines will be superintended by Messrs. B. J. Smith, P. Garretson and C. E. Howser, who have been overseeing this work in China for the past three years.

We are registering our five letters patent with the several American consulates in China. These patents fully cover our method and process and all infringements will be vigorously prosecuted, as will the users of the product made on any machines that infringe our patents.

Owners of egg factories desiring to install our machines for use early next season are advised to place their orders as soon as possible, as considerable delay in transportation and installation cannot be avoided.
